A man of decision—A judge.
The prevailing color among newspapers—Red.
Outputs are kept down by the heavy taxes.
An Oriental tale—The camel's—Don't know.
The man who digs ditches gets paid well for his work.
A try-fing matter—A Graco-Romans wrestling-match.
A match safe—One put up where the small boy can't get at it.
Where was he when he spider, and where will she be when he spider?
Yes, James, a large crowd often goes without crucifixes—Kaiser's City.
"When can you pay me?" asked the politician. "Don't you," replied the faithful deliverer.
Ray, for instance, a dog loses his paw, and a rooster loses his wattle, does it make organs of them?
The fellow who was so much struck by a young lady wanted to return a kiss for the blow—Lancet's Currier.
Drummers never have to serve an apprenticeship. As soon as they enter upon their business they become journeymen.
For printers only: At companies are like Russian criminals in at least one respect—they stand in dread of an out—Home Sentinel.

An exchange publishes an article headed "How to tell a mad dog." We have nothing to tell a mad dog that we have not learned by telephonic or postal card.
The difference between the preacher, the builder and the architect of a church is simply this: One is the rector, the other is the architect, and the third is the director.

When a young man will pay $2 for a delivery wagon and a play-horse to take his girl out for a steady drive he really means to marry her for love—Detroit Free Press.

While a female fiddler was playing for a dance in Colorado, her horse took fire and burned to the ground. Little did she know that while her horse was burning—Mod-ern Argosy.

"What is the meaning of a back-biter?" asked a gentleman at a Sunday-school examination. This was a puzzle. It went down the class until it came to a simple truth, who said: "Perhaps it's a flea."

Jones says when he was a boy it was Palm Sunday all the year round with him. No wonder Jones was never married. He got all he wanted of that article in childhood's happy hours—Boston Transcript.

A young gentleman called on a new acquaintance the other evening and said: "I will never call on her again. He says though she was not all his fancy painted, the fence was. Owing to the point on his nose, he has not been since—Rocky Mountain Herald.

A mad dog scare in an Arkansas town recently resulted in the immediate execution of 200 healthy dogs. In the meantime the original mad dog, having swallowed the bones that was choking him, went around wondering what they were killing all the dogs for—Hawkeye.

A newboy went into a cigar store and asked for a five-cent cigar. Upon receiving which he lit off the end and lit it, throwing down a lead nickel. "Look here, it ain't good," said the man, "it's a five-cent cigar." "I know it, but I smoke it, anyhow," responded the newboy.

It was their first night aboard the steamer. "At last," he said, tenderly, "we are all alone, out upon the deep waters of the dark blue sea, and your heart will always beat for me as it has been in the past." "My heart's all right," she answered, languidly, "but my stomach feels awful."

A Berlin butcher has written a five-act comedy that is about to be presented in that city. The author, it is presumed, "steaks" his reputation on its success, and the actress who speaks the tenderline will be "dressed to kill," of course. The price of admission for choice seats will be four-quarters—Nor-ristown Herald.

"If the county would give me as much money as it paid for ferrets for sending me here," remarked a vagrant in jail, "I could buy an outfit and go prospecting." Inside of 'em he was to develop the resources of the country, they stick me in here and hang and lodge me for three months for nothing—Law's a queer lay-out.

Discontented Jones was sitting on a bench out on the beach, looking very discomfited, when old Uncle Moses came along. "What's the matter now, Jones?" asked the old man. "I'm just a worryin' about myself," responded Discontented Jones. "You're the biggest fool, nigger, on Galveston Island. You're always worryin' yourself to death about nuffin at all."

If there is one thing more embarrassing than another, it is a vagrant waiting at the depot for a friend, to have a plump female trip lightly from the train, and both her seal-like arms around your neck, and plant a kiss full upon your mouth, the size of a liver pad, with the hearty exclamation, "Why, cousin Joe, I'm delighted to see you," when you never saw the said vagrant in the entire course of your natural existence, until the half minute previous—Burlington Hawkeye.

It was in the smoking-room of an Atlantic steamer that a worthy Tuston was talking about weather forecasts. "Look here," said he, "I tell you just it is: You better don't take no stock in dem weather fore-dictions. Does people don't know nothing. They can't do no better as I can." "But, my dear sir," said a person present, "they foretold the storm which we have just encountered." "Well, dot ish so," said the Tuston, contemptuously, "but I tell you what it is—dot storm would have come upon the same if it had not been predicted."

A gentleman had five daughters, the first of whom married a man by the name of Poor, the second a Mr. Little, the third a Mr. Short, the fourth a Mr. Long, and the fifth a Mr. Hogg. At the wedding of the latter her sisters with their husbands were there, and the old gentleman said to his guests: "I have taken pains to educate my daughters that they may be as well as their part in life and do honor to my family. I had that all my pains, care and expectations have insured on nothing but a Poor, Little, Short, Brown, Hogg."

LOVE-LORN WOMEN.
Love-lorn women are credited with strange freaks. In a London paper, it was lately asserted that the original of Dickens's Miss Havesham still existed in the flesh not far from Vauxhall, in the person of an old maid lady, who, when she was young, had loved an attachment which would go to bed and never get up again; and kept her word. "The years have come and gone, and the house has never been swept or garlanded; the garden is an overgrown tangle; and the eccentric lady has spent twenty years between the sheets." The teller of the story really put a name to it; and the friends of the "eccentric lady" soon published an indignant repudiation of the romance, which in all likelihood was simply an adaptation of the case of a Lady Betty C— who, it is asserted, took an unhappy love affair so much to heart that she went to her bed, and actually lay therein for the remaining twenty-five years of her life—Chambers's Journal.

HE TOOK HER SISTER'S PLACE.
Daisy Shoemaker, the pretty daughter of a farmer living near Richmond, Va., had agreed to elope with Westland Pierce, but when the critical moment arrived she feared to transgress her parent's wishes, and would not go to the rendezvous. Her sister, Jane, two years her senior, begged her to keep her tryst with her lover, but all in vain. "Well, if you don't keep your word with Westland, I'll do it for you," she said, and indignantly leaving her sister, she got into the buggy and dashed off, despite the screams of her sister. Miss Jane reached the waiting place; explanations were made; and she was willing to take her sister's place. The lover, touched by her pluck, and captivated by her determination not to let the plan fall through, did actually marry her.

When the new roof was being placed on the old home of President Lincoln at Springfield, a young lad purchased the old shingles at five cents a wheelbarrow load. The boy then bought a scroll saw, and has since that time been employing his time in making ornaments from those old shingles. He is now selling them at from fifty cents to $1 a piece. If that boy lives he'll own a railroad.

M. Dolan has introduced the telephone in connection with his scientific explorations of the bed of the Bay of Naples. By its use the diver and the boatmen overhead are able to communicate with each other quickly and intelligently.

Analogy, although it is not infallible, is yet that telescope of the mind by which it is narrowly assisted in the discovery of both physical and moral truth.

Lord Bacon believed that doctrines should flow from the Scriptures "gently pressed, and not wrested into controversies and counterpotheses."

Nothing so confuses a lover while making a declaration of the tender passion as to be obliged to stop and sneeze during the ritual.

How many men there are who think they are making themselves ridiculous.

Pret-well is a sad word, but if we should only contrive to say it to some of our bad habits we should be much happier—Es-change.

A head-strong man and a fool may wear the same cap.

He who foresees calamities suffers them twice over.

LINKED TOGETHER.
Complaints go on tropes. They are associated by reason. Get one disease and you'll have others. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" strikes at the root of all disease. You cannot take it amiss, no matter what your particular trouble may be. For all ailments of the Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Bowels, it is worth more than its weight in gold. A silver dollar will buy it, whether you go to your drug store, or address the Proprietor, Dr. Kennedy, at Rondout, N. Y.
